NEBRASKA SPELLS "SPORTSMANSHIP"

The University of Nebraska is known and respected all over the nation for its red-attired fans, as well as its football teams.

Nebraska fans also have a nationwide reputation for good sportsmanship, at home and away.

"Big League"—that's the way Nebraska teams and fans have acquitted themselves in past seasons, and that's the same goal for 1980.

The University of Nebraska urges all 1980 fans to continue this fine tradition of sportsmanship by extending courtesy to the visiting teams and officials.

All of us on the Cornhusker Staff salute our fans as the greatest in the nation and thank you for your support and sportsmanship.

Yours for Nebraska,

'Osborne vs. Powers—The Fourth Meeting'— '30-Year Reunion of 1950 Team'

Nebraska Hopes To Snap Missouri's Lincoln Win Streak Today

In a key Big 8 battle today which will help decide the Big 8 representative to the Orange Bowl, Tom Osborne's Nebraska Cornhuskers host Warren Powers' Tigers from the University of Missouri.

The Huskers and Tigers have identical marks of 6-1 overall and 3-0 in the Big 8. In this week's United Press International poll, NU is ranked No. 7 and Mizzou is rated No. 15. Last week in Boulder, the Cornhuskers beat Colorado, 45-7, while in Manhattan, Missouri defeated Kansas State 13-3 before an ABC-TV regional audience.

Osborne enters the game with a 71-19-2 mark, for a winning percentage of .783, making him the fifth winningest active coach in America. Powers, in his third season at MU, is 21-10 at Columbia, and 27-15 in four years of college coaching—in 1977 he was the head mentor at Washington State.

Osborne has faced Powers three times and Powers has won twice. In 1977, Washington State defeated Nebraska in Lincoln, 19-10 and in 1978, Missouri defeated the Huskers in Lincoln, 35-31. Last year in Columbia, Nebraska beat the Tigers, 23-20.

Missouri's coaching staff will be very familiar to Husker fans at today's game. Starting with Powers, who was an NU offensive and defensive back from 1960-62 and was Nebraska's secondary coach from 1969-76. Offensive coordinator

John Faiman was a Nebraska quarterback from 1960-62 and coached in the Nebraska high school system for 13 years. Secondary coach Zaven Yarianian was a Cornhusker defensive back from 1972-73, as was defensive ends coach Mark Heydorff, from 1973-74. Tight ends and special teams coach Dick Beechner coached in the Lincoln Public School system for nine years, was an NU graduate assistant from 1965-66, served as head coach at Hiram Scott College in Scottsbluff from 1966-70, was an NU assistant coach from 1974-75 and was a Husker administrative assistant in 1976. Running backs coach Bill Thornton was a star Husker fullback from 1960-62 and an NU assistant coach from 1969-71. Weight coach Dave Redding was a Cornhusker defensive end from 1973-75 and a graduate assistant in '76.

A big factor in today's game will be the presence or absence of NU senior I-Back Jarvis Redwine and Mizzou senior quarterback Phil Bradley. Redwine, who for the first six weeks of college ball was the country's leading rusher, broke a rib against Florida State on Oct. 4 and missed the Kansas and Oklahoma State games. He played last week against Colorado, gaining 64 yards on nine carries, but left late in the first quarter with a left thigh bruise. Bradley, who is just 110 yards from becoming the Big 8's all-time total offense leader, missed last week's Kansas State game because of a bruised shoulder.

With Redwine missing from the lineup against the Buffs, the Husker stars were sophomore I-Back Roger Craig and senior offensive end Derrie Nelson. Craig, playing for the injured Redwine and senior Craig Johnson (right shoulder bruise), gained 176 yards on 21 carries and scored three times. For his effort, he was the Big 8 Offensive Player of the Week. Nelson had five unassisted tackles, two stops behind the line for a loss of 18 yards and was credited with forcing a fumble.

Nebraska leads the series, 38-32-3, but the Tigers have won four of the last seven games, including the last three in Lincoln—1978, MU 35-NU 31; 1976, MU 34-NU 24 and 1974, MU 21-NU 10.

Another highlight of today's game will be the 30th reunion of the 1950 Husker squad, that was 6-2-1 overall and led by All American Bobby Reynolds.

As today's game is about to get underway, Cornhusker fans welcome Powers and his staff, the Tiger players and all their fans to the 110th straight sellout at Memorial Stadium, a continuing NCAA record.

These cassette deck makers have very high standards.

And this is how they set them.

With TDK SA. It's the high bias reference standard for these major cassette deck manufacturers. Which means that when they set the high bias position on their decks, there's a TDK SA inside. Since all these decks are adjusted to sound their best with TDK SA, it stands to reason yours will, too.

A lot of deck owners agree. When they listen to the more than 35 manufacturers who recommend TDK SA, they try it. When they listen to their music on TDK SA, they're convinced. They feel TDK SA's Super Avilyn formulation handles their music better than any chrome tape. And TDK SA's Super Precision Mechanism assures years of reliable performance. Each TDK SA cassette is backed by a lifetime warranty.*

You can listen to all the cassettes that might meet the high bias standard. Or you can buy the one that sets it. TDK SA.

College of Architecture

By Connie Sue Gaskill Gulick
Graduate Assistant
Office of University Information

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln's College of Architecture doesn't only benefit the 585 students enrolled in coursework. It benefits the entire state, according to comments made by community leaders, community developers and past graduates.

What are examples of ways the College of Architecture assists our state?

"The support and response of UNL's College of Architecture was overwhelming in the aftermath of the Grand Island tornado," said Mike Higgins, President of Overland National Bank in Grand Island and the chairman of Grand Island's Committee for Recovery.

"We were going 1500 directions and all of a sudden Dean Steward, Roger Massey and some other faculty walked in and said, 'Hi, you've a University to help you. What do you need?'" he remembered. "It was a welcome and unexpected shot in the arm."

"They tried to help us identify resources the college had to offer and asked us which would be helpful. They turned the college over to us—as far as faculty were concerned," Higgins said, adding he was "afraid he might accidentally overlook someone" since faculty from the College of Architecture as well as from the College of Business Administration, the School of Journalism, the Department of Sociology, and the Computer Center provided assistance, too.

With help from UNL, Grand Island's recovery process was broken into 16 task forces, composed of 300 people.

"We're faced with the problem of rebuilding 25% of our city, and 25% of our tax base," said Higgins. "We wanted to be sure we built prudently, but without delay. We needed to learn about contemporary building codes—we wanted to take advantage of the latest construction techniques."

Recovery Spectacular

"Since the tornado, we have worked with a number of people charged with the challenge of restoring devastated communities," continued Higgins. "One of the most reinforcing statements I've heard about our recovery came from Charles Harper, the chairman of the American Institute of Architects Disaster Task Force."

"Harper, who has been involved in recovery efforts from disasters over the last 10 years, termed Grand Island's recovery as 'spectacular,'" Higgins said.

According to College of Architecture Dean Cecil Steward, the College of Architecture has established four public-service capacities in which it serves the state.

"Even though the services we offer are quite broad," he said, "we attempt to focus public service activities around architecture and construction in the traditional definition—of one building on one location."

Stewart cited as examples the college's involvement in the Haymarket Revitalization Project and in helping a north Omaha neighborhood group make a study to determine its need for a community center, which led to the College's helping the group apply for grant money.

Serving the State

"The college provides assistance in the design of parks and recreational facilities, as it's currently doing in Grand Island, Wahoo and other communities," the dean said.

A third way in which the college serves the state is to further community development from a social service aspect, Steward said. The college's support role to the Department of Economic Development's Nebraska Community Improvement Program (NCIP) is an example of this type of service.

Fourthly, the college also assists in community wide planning, as exhibited in its assistance to the city of Fremont after a gas line explosion destroyed the Pathfinder Hotel.

"The city wanted to look upon the explosion as an opportunity, rather than a disaster," the dean said, noting the College was asked to help formulate a broad scale plan for Fremont's central business district.

"The College of Architecture sees public service work as a vehicle for helping students understand reality while at the same time benefiting the community," said Steward. "In trying to provide students with laboratory experience, we do everything possible to keep from being, or perceived as being, in competition with professional practitioners."

Interest in City

"The interest of the College of Architecture's faculty and students in the city of Lincoln is evident in a number of ways," said Lincoln Mayor Helen Boosalis.

"Dean Steward has served on the Capitol Environs Planning Committee, and many other faculty are currently involved," the Mayor said, such as Jim McGraw, Marie Arnot, Jim Griffin and Roger Massey, who serve on the urban design, criminal justice, jail planning process and city planning commissions, respectively.

Boosalis noted faculty members have also shown supportive interest in the Lincoln community through assigning class projects, like the Haymarket Revitalization Plan, in which graduate students invited property owners and citizens to participate in a revitalization workshop.

"The College sees public service work as a vehicle for helping students understand reality while at the same time benefiting the community."

Students also generated a plan for the area, which was displayed in the Burlington Depot and the City-County Building, Boosalis said. "It gave citizens an opportunity to see what the area could look like," she said.

"Many of our leading architects are UNL graduates," said John Savage, a vice-president of Leo A. Daly Company, Architects and Engineers of Omaha, adding that 70 of the company's professional architects and engineers received their training at UNL.

Dean Cecil Steward

"There are several ways our company benefits from the presence and quality of the programs and graduates of the College of Architecture," he said.

"For one thing, we have a local, available source of people we can hire. They are trained in our regional architecture and have a tenacity and readiness to work hard that is not always found in graduates from other geographical areas," said Savage, who is being honored this week as a distinguished alumni invited to return to UNL for Master's Week.

"There's also a big advantage to having programs and library facilities nearby—not in New Haven, Connecticut or Berkeley, California," he said, adding Leo A. Daly employees frequently attend College of Architecture sponsored programs which feature national design critics.

Help from the Community Resource and Research Center (CRRC) in UNL's College of Architecture is appreciated by coordinators and communities involved in the Nebraska Community Improvement Program (NCIP), said NCIP staffer Donna diNatale, at the Department of Economic Development.

"The College of Architecture has expert resource people in their Community Resource and Research Center," said diNatale, noting the specialties of the faculty and NCIP staff complement each other.

"Their people are park planning experts," she said. "They are able to provide assistance in anything from selecting a park site to designing it. CRRC has also offered planting workshops," diNatale continued, explaining that such a workshop provides NCIP members with an opportunity to learn what plants look attractive but will require less maintenance than others for use in parks.

diNatale said NCIP staffers are expert in the area of leadership training and development and goal setting and needs analysis.

"We are grateful to CRRC for helping neighborhood groups prepare NCIP competition materials and in assisting with NCIP competition judging," she said.

Good Philosophy

Keith Dubas, an architect employed at Bahr, Vermeer, Haecker, Ltd., in Lincoln graduated from the College's Master of Architecture program in 1977. "I wouldn't be doing the work I am presently doing if I'd not attended the College of Architecture at UNL," said Dubas, adding the program was flexible enough to allow him to pursue his own interests.

Noting he feels he developed a good philosophy about architecture while attending UNL, Dubas added, "People need architects. By helping people understand their feelings and value structures about the environment, architects can transform those feelings into the three-dimensional physical world."

"Speakers were brought in and we were exposed to the theories of architects on the east and west coasts," he continued. "Each individual then must choose his own personal philosophy about architecture."

"The opportunity to hear various philosophies, combined with the pragmatic approach emphasized by the school, turns out some very competent people who are highly recruited," said Dubas.

Look who switched to Natural Light.

Nick Buoniconti switched to Natural Light because he prefers the taste.

He had no idea that Natural Light's great taste comes from using only the finest natural ingredients.

Or that there are no artificial ingredients in Natural Light, unlike some other light beers he had tried.

We don't think he even noticed the ingredients listed right on the label: Water, Barley malt, Rice, Hops, Yeast.

But Nick Buoniconti would agree. It's not the name that makes you good—it's what's inside that counts.

Natural Light.
Taste is why you'll switch.

CONCENTRATE ON THE LINE PLAY TODAY

by George Breazeale, Austin AMERICAN-STATESMAN

Amos Alonzo Stagg said it eight decades back, Knute Rockne reiterated it a half-century ago, and contemporary coaching figures, even at the risk of belaboring the point, also say it: football games are won and lost on the line.

War in the trenches is as old as college football—and so many clichés describe line play because in no other area of the game is greater emphasis

continued

The Season Belongs to Jantzen

Holiday Warmth.

For a grand opening this Christmas, let friends, lovers and family know that a Jantzen cableknit sweater would do handsomely, thank you.

They have the look and feel of wool, but these fashion classics are machine washable Wintuk Orlon.[®] About $29 to $35.

put on the sport's basic elements: blocking and tackling.

How important in a game's outcome are the blocking performances of offensive linemen and the tackling skills of defensive trenchmen? Only a shade less vital than life or death, says one coach from the Southwest.

"I have never—and I mean never—seen a team win a game, if both its offensive and defensive lines were dominated by the opposition," he declared. "Occasionally, a team may win on some sort of break—an interception or a fumble—if its offensive line is dominated, but its defensive line plays an outstanding game. But I really don't think it's possible for both your offensive and defensive lines to be outplayed and still have genuine hopes of winning the football game.

"Realistically, I'm not sure it's possible nowadays, in this two-platoon era of college play, to win without dominance by both your offensive and defensive lines. Twenty-five or so years ago, in the one-platoon era when players went both ways, coaches like Bear Bryant in his first year at Texas A&M (1954), Bowden Wyatt at Arkansas (1954) and, a bit later, Darrell Royal in his first couple of years at Texas (1957 and 1958) made field position football, emphasizing defense and forcing mistakes by opposing offenses, a way to compete while they were building their programs. But now, in playing two-platoon ball, you find the winners have outstanding line talent and cohesion both offensively and defensively."

From a spectator standpoint—a quarter century ago and now—line domination, particularly by an offensive forward wall, isn't easy to see.

"Most spectators tend to watch the quarterback and/or the ball carrier, and that's a natural reaction," said a Midwest coach. "Of course, if a ball carrier is held for no gain, or short yardage, two or three plays in a row, and the quarterback is rushed off his feet, figuring out which line dominates isn't difficult. But when two teams with comparable personnel are playing, it sometimes becomes a question of which line can adjust more quickly off information coaches in the press box can feed down to the sideline.

"Spectators can generally get an idea of what the play will be by watching the center and the two guards," the coach continued. "The blocking angles of those three—particularly if one or both guards pull—can frequently indicate where the ball is going."

Another coach agrees—up to a point.

"So much ground offense, particularly on non-option plays, is keyed on running to daylight that it's sometimes difficult to tell exactly where a play was designed to go. Offensive linemen are frequently taught to take the defensive linemen to where he wants to go. If the defensive player moves to the outside, then the blocker continues to move him in that direction and the runner goes to the inside, to where the hole should be open.

"If it sounds complicated, then it is," the coach added. "You can imagine what a freshman lineman, trying to play offense for the first time in college, faces in his first few practices. And yet, after he's been there a while, he learns set blocking rules—do this if a defensive lineman lines up head-on, do that if he's just off the inside shoulder, do a double team block if the defensive player is far enough into the gap. Eventually, everything irons out."

Ironing out, the coach admits, seldom comes as soon for an offensive lineman as it does for his defensive counterpart.

"A big disadvantage—a very big one—is that an offensive lineman isn't supposed to use his hands. His key advantage is that he knows what the snap count is and, with the quickness and strength the great ones have, he has a split second edge in setting his block.

"To utilize that advantage, though, the offensive lineman must have superb discipline. He must keep his cool, pick out the man he'll block on and decide what type of block will be most effective. He

continued

Spectators can generally get an idea what the play will be by watching the movements of the center and the two guards.

can't do it with the 'wild man' syndrome you sometimes see among defensive linemen.

"And yet, although he must control his emotions and play with intelligence more than instinct, he must still be aggressive. And that's why, at my school, you usually see freshman and sophomore linemen break in more quickly as defensive starters than they do on offense. That certainly doesn't mean defensive players have no discipline at all. They have to stay at home, hold their ground in certain situations, but generally an offensive lineman needs more discipline.

"Ideally, though, if you have an established program, your front line players, both offensively and defensively, are juniors and seniors—with the younger ones getting enough playing time to be brought to full maturity in spring training and in fall two-a-days."

In the centuries of war—and in the century-plus of college football—the objective of total victory has always been the same ... but in both undertakings the weaponry has changed.

"Linemen—offensive and defensive—are better than they were a decade or so ago, because they're at least 10 to 15 pounds heavier, on the average, and just as quick or maybe even quicker than they were then. Up until about 1970, the emphasis was on quickness and speed, with the player weighing 200 or 210 sometimes having the chance to play on the basis of his ability to move.

"That's no longer true. Coaches are still looking for the quick ones—but now they must weigh, at a minimum, 235 to 240. And 250 or 260 is even better, if the quickness is there.

"Off season programs and better diets have accounted for the change. And now it means the quick 240-pounder is going to blow the slow 240-pounder and the quick 210-pounder, if there are any left, off the line. And the smaller offensive lineman just can't consistently block out an equally quick, stronger player who outweighs him by 30 pounds.

"A team without the big players on defense can sometimes use stunts effectively, jumping from one gap to another and confusing blocking assignments—but only for a while. There are only so many stunts you can use, and after an offensive line picks them up—usually by halftime, if not before—then the advantage is gone and size and quickness will make the difference.

"So now the recruiters look for the big players who can run. If a high school boy already weighs 240, fine. If he weighs 220, you look at his build, see if a strength program will put 20 pounds on him without robbing him of quickness.

"If they have the size, the quickness and will hit, that's about as good a recruiting judgment as you can make on them," the coach concluded.

But ultimate proof is sometimes years away, especially for offensive linemen, who mature as juniors and seniors. And if spectators have trouble in making judgments, then coaching staffs also need a sophisticated tool: game films and the movie projector.

"We think our offensive linemen must grade 80 percent or better for us to win," one coach said, "and grading is an involved process. That's why projectors have reverse switches on them—to back up the film and look at a player again and again, to check every phase of his performance.

"We have three critical factors in grading an offensive lineman. First, he must step off the correct foot; he can make a great block, but if it's off the wrong foot he'll lose points because he can't consistently block effectively that way. Second, the position of his body on the player he's blocking is equally important. If he can't establish good consistent contact for the necessary time to stop the defensive man, then it isn't a good block. And, finally, if he's effective enough to put the opposing player on the ground, then he's graded extra for that.

"Different formations have different blocking styles—but no matter what type is involved, if a lineman is slow on that first step off the ball, he's in trouble. He's already lost the advantage of knowing the snap count and if it's pass blocking, the defensive man is usually past him.

"It all adds to the same thing. Whoever dominates the line play wins. It will always be that way, as long as football remains a contact sport."

The team that dominates the line more often than not wins the game.

DOAK WALKER

In a football game against Baylor in 1949, SMU halfback Doak Walker caught a touchdown pass while lying flat on his back in the end zone.

Nobody was surprised. Walker was a senior in 1949, and by then all those who watched or followed the Mustangs had long ago concluded that nothing was beyond the talents of the big little man a lot of them called the Miracle Worker in a Red Helmet.

But most of all they called him The Doaker. In Southwest Conference lore he still lives as The Doaker, although it has been 30 seasons since Doak Walker caught his last collegiate pass, made his last run, produced his last punt.

He stood no more than 5-11 and weighed no more than 165 pounds during his four years as an SMU star (he started at SMU during World War II, when freshmen were eligible for varsity play). And yet in various years, while also playing superbly on defense, he led the Southwest Conference in rushing, scoring, punting and kickoff returns. And miracles.

"He was the greatest player I ever coached or hoped to coach," said his old mentor, College Football Hall of Fame member Matty Bell. "He could have been All-America on his blocking alone."

As it was, Doak Walker was All-America for three years because of all his talents, and although the Southwest Conference now is 65 years old, no other SWC player has ever become a three-time All-America.

That third year of All-America acclaim was something Walker asked not to receive. After a fine freshman season in which he was named to the all-conference team, he had superb sophomore and junior seasons in which he won just about every honor in the book, including the Maxwell and Heisman Awards.

But Walker was injured in SMU's third game in 1949, against Rice, and he hobbled in and out of the lineup for the remainder of the season. Although a number of publications named him to their All-America teams, Walker personally thought he had missed too much time to deserve such recognition. So he wrote Collier's Magazine and requested that publication not to name him to its All-America selection. Collier's agreed, but named him Player of the Year because of his sportsmanship.

In 35 college games, Walker gained 2,076 yards rushing, another 1,786 yards passing, and caught 29 passes for 479 yards while scoring 303 points and averaging 39.6 yards punting.

But statistics never did do justice to

GREAT UPSETS IN COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Bill Swiacki makes the catch to set up Columbia's winning touchdown in the Lions' 1947 upset of Army.

by Jack Clary

Upsets.

What would a football season be if we didn't have them? It would be like hamburger without ketchup, hot dogs without mustard. They are the spice, the tastemakers that prevent hundreds of games from blending into each other and making each fall weekend a dull reading of scores. After all, what fun would college football really be if the favored teams won all the time?

Of course, coaches who are the victims and fans and players who are the vanquished may have a different feeling. And who hasn't been in that spot more than a few times? But when your team is the up-setter, nothing is more delectable and delightful than seeing it do something it wasn't supposed to be capable of—winning.

A handy dictionary defines the noun version of "upset" as "an act of overturning; an act of throwing into disorder ... an unexpected defeat ... an emotional disturbance ..." and the verb version is characterized, in part, as "... to overturn, to disturb the poise of ... to throw into disorder ... to defeat unexpectedly ... to cause physical disorder ... to make somewhat ill."

Lose a game you're supposed to win, and you can suffer all of the above—and do it simultaneously.

Upsets come in many forms and combinations. When bitter rivals play each other, there really is no such thing as a favorite unless one team is far superior in personnel to the other—and then even that is subject to question, as has happened so often in the Army-Navy series.

Take the 1948 game, for example. Army was unbeaten in eight games and ranked third nationally; Navy had lost its eight games. But when President Harry S. Truman walked into Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium, only three weeks after his own astounding upset of Thomas E. Dewey in the presidential election, the day's first omen was struck in the form of a banner which read: Gallup picks Army.

It was more than an omen. Some rancid turkey stuffing served at the Cadets' Thanksgiving Day dinner only two days before the game had left the Army team riddled with dysentery. In addition, Gil Stephenson and Bobby Jack Stuart, the Cadets' two best running backs, had suffered leg injuries on the same day in practice a few days before the game and were not at full speed. Navy, on the other hand, hobbled by injuries all season, had at last become a well team.

The final result was that Army, a 21-point favorite, never could shake the Middies and was thankful to settle for a 21-21 tie, forged by Navy in the final minutes on a touchdown by Bill Hawkins and Roger Drew's crucial extra point.

Two years later—and two years earlier—the story was the same. In 1946, mighty Army with Doc Blanchard and Glenn Davis was ending three years of intercollegiate supremacy during which they never lost a game and had been in a scoreless tie with Notre Dame a few weeks previously. Navy had won only one game that season and was a 21-point underdog. Again it was Bill Hawkins and quarterback Reeves Baysinger, the heroes of '48, who sullied the Cadets—ironically not by winning, but with the most heroic loss (if there be such a thing) imaginable.

Arnold Galiffa dazzled the Wolverine defense as Army downed Michigan, 21-7, in 1949.

A pass from Baysinger to Leon Bramlett in the first minute of the final quarter gave Navy its third touchdown, but the third of three missed extra points left the Middies trailing 21-18. Navy had so outplayed Blanchard's and Davis' team that the 102,000 fans in that massive stadium fully expected the Middies would come back and win; and to this day there are some who are not so sure following the final sequence of plays that officials claimed left Navy only a few feet short of Army's goal line when the game ended. But surging crowds had so obliterated the sideline markers that when Navy running back Lynn Chewning was tackled near the sidelines it could not be determined whether he had stepped out of bounds at Army's seven-yard line.

Officials kept the clock running and the game ended a few seconds later, before Navy could get off one last try for victory.

Then in 1950, with another unbeaten Army team facing another one-victory Navy team, the Middies finally broke through. Quarterback Bob Zastrow led them to a 14-2 win, and another 21-point favorite lay slain.

Of course, Army returned the "favor" in 1953, beating favored Navy 20-7 only two years after the so-called "cribbing scandal" at West Point had decimated the Cadets' football program. And then in 1963, with Roger Staubach's Navy team poised to accept a bid from the Cotton Bowl to play Texas for the national championship, a decided Army underdog replayed the 1946 game, this time in the role of the team whose chances died close to the goal line as a cruel clock ticked off the final seconds, denying it a chance for victory.

But if there is one upset in the post-World War II era that is best remembered, it probably is Notre Dame's 7-0 victory over Oklahoma—at Norman, yet—in 1957 that snapped the Sooners' 47-game winning streak. This was an odd role for Notre Dame because legend and lore so often have placed the Irish in the role of the upsetee, as happened when Purdue snapped their 38-game unbeaten streak early in 1950, or when, in the final 1949 game, an underdog SMU team, playing without Doak Walker (but with a young sophomore replacement named Kyle Rote) put Frank Leahy's national champions to the wall before losing 27-20.

Oklahoma, in 1957, was considered all but invincible, particularly against a young Notre Dame team that had lost its two previous games and was tabbed an 18-point underdog. Ironically, Notre Dame had been the last team to beat Coach Bud Wilkinson's Sooners, 28-21, in 1953.

The game was televised nationally but that didn't faze this author, then an intrepid young sportswriter for the Associated Press in New York City. It was his turn that week to make the selections for Saturday, Nov. 16, and in full command of his senses and with a firm realization that Notre Dame often was most dangerous when picked to lose, the young man crisply wrote for national consumption: Notre Dame 7, Oklahoma 0, and then proceeded to try and explain how it would all happen.

The explanations are fogged now but the game remains a masterpiece, with first the Sooners besieging Notre Dame's end zone in the first quarter, and then with the Irish being stymied at Oklahoma's one- and six-yard lines in the second. The game continued this way in the second half until, with about ten minutes to play, Coach Terry Brennan's team began an 80-yard march and finally was faced with fourth down and goal from Oklahoma's three-yard line.

ND quarterback Bob Williams had seen Oklahoma's linebackers key on the direction either he or fullback Nick Pietrosante moved. So he faked a dive play to the latter and pitched the ball to halfback Dick Lynch, running to the right. Tight end Monte Stickles cut down Oklahoma's end and Pietrosante not only carried out his fake, but then wiped out the defensive back as Lynch ran unmolested into the end zone for the game's only touchdown, with only four minutes to play.

A 23-yard field goal by Purdue's Rock Supan gave the Boilermakers an upset win over Michigan in 1976.

Ironically, Notre Dame has been involved in a couple of streak-ending games. In 1946, it played to a scoreless tie with Army that ended Blanchard's and Davis' winning streak of 25 games, though many had made the Irish the favorite that day. Only a game-saving tackle by Johnny Lujack, on Blanchard, preserved the tie. During the next three seasons, the Irish had only a 14-14 tie against Southern Cal in 1948 to mar an otherwise perfect record until state rival Purdue, with sophomore quarterback Dale Samuels whip-sawing the ND pass defense, led the Boilermakers to a 28-14 victory in the second game of the 1950 season.

As upsetters go, few can rival Purdue. It ended Michigan State's 28-game victory streak with a 6-0 upset in 1953, snapped a 13-game string by Notre Dame with a 27-14 win in 1954, and through the years probably has been Notre Dame's biggest nemesis.

Michigan's Wolverines are no strangers to the upset bug, either, particularly in recent Rose Bowls where they consistently have fallen victim to the West Coast champion. And good old Purdue was right in the middle of another in 1976 when the Wolverines brought an 8-0 record into Ross Ade Stadium and went away 16-14 losers when Rock Supan kicked a 23-yard field goal with 4:20 to play for the winning points.

Still, Michigan had a chance to win—but Bob Wood's 37-yard attempt with 14 seconds left was wide to the left. Even so, the Boilermakers stormed all over Michigan in this game. Trailing 7-0, they rolled to their first TD on Scott Dierking's four-yard run, then took a 13-7 lead when he ran 25 yards on a draw play. But Supan missed the extra point, setting up another "typical" day for Purdue's upset-makers.

Michigan, under Bennie Oosterbaan, had a 25-game winning streak and seemed en route to a second straight national championship when Earl Blaik brought his Army team to Ann Arbor on the second October Saturday of 1949. When he left, his Cadets had dazzled the Wolverines in a 21-7 victory. Quarterback Arnold Galiffa baffled Michigan's 4-4 defense with a series of sweeps by Frank Fischl and Jim Cain, inside running by Karl Kuckhahn, subbing for Stephenson, and his own innovative keeper plays that he deftly mixed with pinpoint passes.

On defense, the Cadets tagged All-America running back Chuck Ortmann so hard on the game's first play that he was carried off the field on a stretcher and did not return. Cain scored Army's second TD on a 10-yard sweep in the second quarter, following a fumble, and after Don Dufek's touchdown had cut the lead to 14-7 in the fourth quarter, Army put the game away on Kuckhahn's late score.

Ohio State also has felt the sting of the upset bug. In 1969, Michigan, under former Woody Hayes assistant Bo Schembechler, defeated what many considered Hayes' greatest team, and in the 1971 Rose Bowl, fell before Heisman Trophy winner Jim Plunkett's Stanford team. At the same time, it was Hayes' young crop of sophs who upset O.J. Simpson and USC in the 1969 Rose Bowl. Simpson had tallied the first Trojan TD and the Buckeye offense held a quick huddle on the sidelines. "We decided then it was time to get with it or we were going to get run out of the park by that guy," fullback Jim Otis remembers—and Ohio State did just that, to the tune of a resounding 27-16 victory in The Juice's last collegiate game.

But whenever upsets are talked about, few will ever forget the one that occurred at old Baker Field in New York City, Columbia's home field for the past half-century. Perhaps it was because it happened in New York, or because it was an Ivy League school, but when the Lions upset Army in 1947, 21-20, the shock waves never ceased.

Navy's Bill Hawking scored the touchdown that tied the game, 21-21, in the 1948 meeting between the two service academies.

Army had not lost a football game since the final 1943 game, against Navy, and in the preceding 32 games, had suffered only that scoreless tie against Notre Dame the previous year. But the Cadets could not cope that day with a lean, glue-fingered end named Bill Swiacki, who has etched his name in football immortality with a pair of diving, sliding catches (among nine for 148 yards that day) that must rank among the clutch grabs of all time.

The first was for Columbia's second TD early in the last quarter to cut Army's lead to 20-14. The second came on Army's three-yard line five minutes later and set up Lou Kusserow's winning touchdown.

You can believe that the Big Town blew sky-high that night. It is part of the exhilaration that goes with college football when the underdog has his day. What would we do without it?

Doak Walker. "His presence could lift a team like no individual I have ever seen," says former big-winning coach Frank Broyles.

Walker was as much a thinker on the field as a producer.

After coach Dutch Meyer cautioned his 1947 TCU Frogs, "whatever you do, don't kick to Walker," The Doaker nonetheless got the ball and returned it 58 yards. As he raced past the SMU bench, he shouted to Matty Bell to "warm up Gil." Only seconds remained. So SMU's best passer, Gil Johnson, entered the game and SMU scored as time ran out, managing a tie on the scoreboard. On the sideline, Dutch Meyer flung his Stetson on the turf and stomped on it.

Doak Walker could drive opponents to such distraction. With Walker in the lineup, the Mustangs twice won the conference championship. In that era they played all their home games in the Cotton Bowl. With Walker supplying the miracles on a team that played it wide open both on the ground and overhead, the fans kept coming in ever-growing numbers—so much so that the Cotton Bowl was enlarged twice during the Walker era, growing by 30,000 seats up to 75,504. And thus it became known as The House That Doak Built.

Doak Walker was born to the game of football. He was handling a football at his coach-father's direction when he was only 18 months old. By the time he was six he was a good kicker. Always wearing No. 37, in high school, college and with the professionals, he went on to win all-state honors at Highland Park High School in Dallas, where he trailed by one year an illustrious teammate, Bobby Layne.

Layne won All-America fame at the University of Texas. Walker appeared Texas-bound, too, but when his high school coach, H. N. (Rusty) Russell, became one of Matty Bell's assistants, Walker decided to enroll at SMU. That was a sad day for the Texas Longhorns, who found Walker-led Mustang teams almost impossible to beat.

In 1948, SMU handed Texas its only conference defeat. Walker scored twice, set up a third touchdown with a pass and kicked three extra points as SMU won, 21-6. The headline on the sports page of a major Texas newspaper the next morning read: "Walker, Walker, Walker, Walker, Walker, Walker."

At the height of his fame, his boyish good looks graced the covers of a dozen magazines, including Life, Look and Collier's. The death of Walker's pet cat once prompted a major wire service to move a story concerning the incident on its state wire. But oddly enough, Walker ended his college career sitting on the bench.

That game was played on Dec. 3, 1949, after the Mustangs' conference season had ended, and it matched SMU against Notre Dame's undefeated national champions. When the game was scheduled the previous summer, SMU, beaten only once in its last 22 games, was the favorite to win the conference for a third year in a row with Walker as a senior. Walker and the Mustangs against the Notre Dame juggernaut—the game looked like a natural.

But when gametime arrived, the crippled Mustangs had finished fifth in the conference race and the injured Walker was in street clothes, unable to play. That day, after Matty Bell gave his pre-game talk, an unlikely speaker took the stand.

"I looked forward all my life," said Doak

Walker, "to playing against Notre Dame. I wanted to end my career with this game. I can't be with you today, but you know I'll be with you ... in every ... other ..."

Walker was too choked up to finish. But the Mustangs went out and almost upset the Fighting Irish anyway, losing only at the finish in a 27-20 game that since has been voted one of the greatest games in Southwest Conference history.

Even in street attire, you see, Doak Walker could fire up a team. And when that game was over, with Walker about to graduate, Matty Bell knew it was time for him to step aside, too, which he did. "Nobody," he always insisted, "ever played football like Doak Walker."

Doak Walker gave the SMU Mustangs three years of All-America performances.

TV OR NOT TV?

By Donn R. Bernstein, ABC Sports, Inc.

TV or not TV? That is the question which haunts the halls of college football every fall as fans and schools alike anxiously await weekly word from ABC Sports announcing which teams will appear on television Saturday afternoon.

The network is totally committed to providing enthusiastic viewers across the country with the most attractive and meaningful college football games available. Under the finely delineated provisions of the NCAA Television Plan, which governs the appearance limitations of each member institution (a school may appear on TV five times during a two-year cycle), the scheduling process assumes several elements of a most complex, intricate and sensitive nature.

You, the college football TV fan, are most likely not familiar with the dozens of details and wrinkles which need to be ironed out in order to piece together a "seasonal package" including 13 national and 45 regional games, so we at ABC Sports hope that you will benefit from this

"crash course" in scheduling.

- A frustrated Southerner, snorting because of the unavailability of tickets to the annual showdown between Alabama and Tennessee, has invited half his neighborhood "to drop by" because he—like ALL good Southerners—assumed the game will be carried over ABC.

- On the West Coast, faithful alums from the University of California figure that their beloved Golden Bears will be shown against mighty Michigan because, they claim, "it's the ONLY game" so "how could ABC possibly pick anybody else?"

- And when Yale plays Harvard in "The Game," Ivy League enthusiasts from Boston to Berkeley perk up and insist, "it's a MUST for television!"

Such is the coast-to-coast clamor which pervades the ranks of millions of vociferous viewers who yearn for their favorite "Game of the Week" to appear on television.

Also neck-deep in this spirited scramble for coveted TV time are the schools, all of which are eager for the exposure, relish the revenue and are proud of the prestige—ingredients which make a Saturday afternoon air date an especially significant happening.

To please those multitude of frenetic fans with the game of their choice each week and to satisfy some 180 NCAA Division I-A and I-AA member institutions would require a formula tantamount to erasing poverty the world over.

How, then, does it happen? By arbitrarily drawing straws? By picking names out of a hat? By holding a raffle? By vote of the coaches or proclamation of the fans? Hardly!

Although many a finger has been pointed at ABC Sports for using the aforementioned methods—among many other gruesome and farfetched suggestions—the selection of games for television evolves out of machinery so complicated that it virtually defies definition.

Let's first examine some basic facts. If you are the rabid fan you claim to be, and a television addict who never misses a college football game over ABC, you will watch during the 1980 season a grand total of 23 ball games (in TV parlance a single football game is known as an exposure) starting with the first week in September and lasting through the first Saturday in December.

In all, you will be treated to a menu of 13 national telecasts and 10 regional games (23 total exposures, remember?). You will enjoy a Monday night game (the season's opener on Sept. 1) and a Friday afternoon game (the day after Thanksgiving, Fri., Nov. 28) in addition to 14 Saturdays (including seven doubleheaders) of action-packed college football.

Hopefully, of these 23 college football telecasts which you so faithfully follow, you will be more than satisfied with the presented schedule. Right? Well, maybe not always . . .

Good fan that you are, you no doubt would love the likes of the nation's top 10 to 20 teams to appear on your screen each week. All that requires, you say, is for ABC to place some cameras on the finest collegiate football fields in America and to just push a button or two. Right? Well, you're definitely wrong! To the chagrin of most viewers, it just doesn't work that way.

Rules and regulations, finely detailed in delicate legalese, dictate the TV appearance limitations for NCAA member institutions. No, my friends, the Notre Dames, Oklahomas, USCs, Michigans, Nebraskas and other such assorted collegiate football powers cannot be televised at will.

It is the philosophy of the NCAA, which includes 139 Division I-A and 39 Division I-AA schools, that television exposure and revenue be shared as widely as possible throughout the membership, which accounts for the appearance limitation rule which we shall examine next.

Quite simply, ABC Sports—under its contractual agreement with the NCAA—is allowed to televise any eligible member institution no more than five times during a two-year period. For those of you willing to keep track of such mundane mechanics, the 1980 season marks the first of a new two-year cycle.

Every eligible school is allowed two basic telecasts per season, one national game and one regional (or two regionals, but not two nationals). To pick up the third—or “bonus” appearance—during one year of the cycle (to reach the maximum of five appearances in two years), a school must then play its game on one of several “exception” dates as provided for in the NCAA Television Plan. Those dates used during the 1980 season are: Monday night, Sept. 1 (Labor Day); the first regular Saturday of the NCAA season Night lighting often determines whether a game is televised.

(Sept. 6); the Friday after Thanksgiving (Nov. 28) and the first Saturday in December (Dec. 6).

In addition to these four “exception” dates, ABC Sports may designate any game during the season it so chooses as the “wild card” game, which allows the teams involved a third TV appearance without having to move to an “exception” date.

Confusing? Absolutely. But not really when you carefully learn the guidelines. Let's carry on.

To put in practice what you—the TOTAL college football television fan—should know by now, let's abstract a hypothetical circumstance involving one of the nation's most attractive TV teams: Notre Dame.

You say you're NOT an Irish fan? Well, bear with us anyway.

Let's say that Notre Dame has a schedule which includes four “Top Ten” teams but the Irish are only available to ABC three times. Let's suggest that for any number of good reasons, Notre Dame cannot move to an “exception” date, so in order to be used a third time ABC has designated ND-USC as the “wild card” game; it will be a national telecast.

This leaves the Irish with two other regularly “charged” basic appearances, one national and one regional. Notre Dame's remaining top opponents are, say, Michigan, Alabama and Penn State, each of which is a national attraction in its own right.

Nationalize Michigan, regionalize Alabama and forfeit Penn State and the can of worms is open. Nationalize Alabama, regionalize Penn State and drop Michigan . . . and more worms.

Furthermore, let's say Alabama has only two appearances available after being used three times the year before. ABC might want the Tide for USC and use Alabama's final appearance against, perhaps, LSU in what promises to be the showdown game for the Southern Conference and the Sugar Bowl. As a result, Alabama-Notre Dame is eliminated . . . and more worms!

Multiply these thorny and extremely critical decisions manifold as they apply to team after team after team. Each school's schedule has to be checked, double-checked and then triple-checked before final disposition is made. More cross-checking. More study. What should be national? What should be regional? What other regional and national options are open that day?

Scheduling decisions are not necessarily made on a one-year basis, but are often determined upon a two-year analysis as ABC attempts to project the best and workable five-game combination of a major school's schedule during the two-year cycle.

And in addition to the scheduling problems inherent with the selection of Division I-A and I-AA schools, ABC Sports is also committed to televising four regular season Division II and three regular season Division III games. Selecting these 14

when you change to Quaker State Sterling Motor Oil.

Quaker State Sterling lubricates better than regular oils, so changing your oil to Sterling can get you better gas mileage. It's specially blended and fortified with new and improved additives to cut friction and improve wear protection.

With Quaker State Sterling in the crankcase your engine doesn't work as hard—so your gasoline goes farther. It's like having extra gas in the tank, for free!

Like all Quaker State Motor Oils, Sterling can help your car last and help you avoid expensive engine repairs.

schools (from over 300) to fill these seven regional games is in itself a most difficult and delicate task.

Although the scheduling puzzle may still be somewhat confusing, hopefully you are putting into place some of the pieces and a clearer picture is being drawn. Let's carry on...

In an effort to "share the wealth" (revenue, exposure and prestige), ABC selects its regional games (45 during the course of a season) from every conference in Division I-A and I-AA over a two-year period and while scheduling decisions are predicated on a team's merit (won-loss record) other factors include logistical, geographical and circumstantial considerations.

If, for example, Penn State should be playing at Maryland and Syracuse is playing at Pittsburgh in a pair of exceptionally attractive and potentially "do-able" games, something has to give.

Put them both on, you say? Easier said than done. They obviously both can't go on at the same time as all four schools are in the eastern regional feed pattern.

So, you ask, put one on during the first half of a doubleheader and the other on during the second half. Fine. Except for one imposing setback. Neither Maryland nor Pittsburgh has a lighted stadium and what happens when it becomes dark around the third quarter? Big trouble!

The "lighting problem" as it pertains to doubleheaders particularly during the months of October, November and December is an example of those "unavoidable circumstances" which all too often play a vital part in the mechanics of scheduling. Most college football stadiums in the country don't have lights.

Earlier than normal kickoffs in the central and mountain time zones to accommodate scheduling of the first half of doubleheaders are also among a myriad of those "unavoidable circumstances" which are hidden to the college football TV fan.

And geographical problems also arise. How can, say, ABC televise both the Purdue-UCLA game and a Michigan-Penn State battle if both games happened to be scheduled on the same day? Purdue and Michigan are in the same feed pattern. And if there are no lights (and there are none in the Big Ten), then a doubleheader is out of the question. Decisions. And more decisions. Not easy ones...

Take, for example, a decision which ABC Sports will be faced with this fall. A pair of traditional classics—Ohio State-Michigan and Oklahoma-Nebraska—are both scheduled on the same day (Nov. 22) at the same time. There are no lights in either Norman or Columbus. A move to an "exception" date for either game could not be worked out. The options are excruciating. Eliminate one game entirely and there will be, in all probability, a national fervor. Regionalize both games and more fervor. How would you like to design a regional feed pattern splitting both games to the entire country and still satisfy some 30 million viewers, all of whom will settle for nothing less than getting BOTH games? Stay tuned...

Through this endless maze of rules and regulations, cans and cannots, do's and don'ts, there still remain the ultimate decisions on scheduling made by an experienced team of ABC Sports executives who engage in exhaustive research and painstaking study of all alternatives.

Keeping its commitment to televising the most attractive and meaningful college football games available while complying with the complicated and restrictive guidelines of the NCAA Television Plan, the network endures an endless dilemma of critical decision making.

While its verdicts do not always please YOU, the viewer, you can at least now better understand that programming college football is anything but a simple matter of learning your ABCs. ■

The Nikon EM. Easiest way to catch all the action!

This is the Nikon for you. Amazingly small, easy to use, and very easy to afford. Born of the tradition of quality that makes Nikon the overwhelming choice of professional photographers. Ready to give you superbly sharp, life-like color shots any pro could be proud of. Automatically!

Just focus and shoot — Nikon space-age electronics do the rest. The Nikon EM even alerts you with an audible "beep" if light conditions are not right for best results.

Add the low-cost motor drive and fire away at up to 2 shots a second. Turn night into day with the inexpensive, totally automatic thyristor flash. Zero in on key plays with sharp Nikon telephoto or zoom lenses...take in the whole field with Nikon wide angle lenses. Now you don't have to be a pro to shoot like one!

All this Nikon picture-ability can be yours for a lot less than you'd imagine. See the Nikon EM and its even more advanced team mates — the compact automatic Nikon FE and classic FM — at your Nikon dealer. You'll find him in the Yellow Pages. Or, write to Nikon Inc., Dept. How the new Chevy Citation can be both compact...

and mid-size at the very same time.

No mirrors, no wires, nothing up our sleeve. Citation really is both compact and mid-size. Watch closely.

Compact on the outside.

Outside, Citation measures only 15 feet bumper to bumper. That's trim enough to fit into 3/4 of a parking space.

Mid-size on the inside.

No hocus-pocus. What we did was to mount Citation's engine sideways, giving you enough room inside to seat five adults comfortably. With space left over in the hatchback that could even surprise Houdini. There's also a removable shelf panel that makes every bit of cargo just seem to disappear.

You've got to drive it to believe it.

Of course, there's a lot more about Citation than meets the eye.

- There's its front-wheel-drive traction on wet roads, through snow and in mud.
- The way its ride can make a stretch of road seem a whole lot smoother.
- Its impressive acceleration.
- And yet still, in the hatchback, wagon-like convenience.

Why not see your Chevy dealer about buying or leasing the new Chevy Citation. You might be amazed. It could be just the car you have in mind.

It's a whole new kind of compact car.

In simple terms, why every Honda has front-wheel drive.

Have you noticed how more and more car manufacturers are switching to front-wheel drive these days?

We're not surprised. We knew the advantages of front-wheel drive a long, long time ago.

In fact, only Honda has sold all its cars in the U.S. with front-wheel drive and a transverse-mounted engine. (Not to mention having sold more than anyone else too.)

So just what are the advantages?

For a start, we've designed a car that's smaller on the outside but with more than enough room inside for both driver and passengers.

This is partly due to the fact that there's no driveshaft running through the passenger compartment. So your passengers have more foot and legroom.

Eliminating the driveshaft also reduces another problem. Because the driveshaft can be a source of noise and vibration. But the advantages of front-wheel drive don't stop at improved space utilization and comfort.

Front-wheel drive puts more of the weight on the front driving wheels. That means better traction.

And since driving power is applied in the direction the car is being steered, it helps you through the turns.

We could go on.

But the only way to really appreciate our front-wheel drive is to test-drive a Honda yourself.

The Civic. The car that was named Motor Trend magazine's Import Car of the Year.

The Accord. Our luxury car.

And the Prelude. Our idea of a sports car.

They all have front-wheel drive.

So if that's what you're looking for in a car, it's worth remembering that Honda is out in front all the way.

Where would a wise investor seek sound advice, attentive service, unbeatable information, and unmatched financial strength?

Merrill Lynch says, close to home.

Don't misunderstand. There's nothing wrong with searching far and wide for investment ideas. It's not easy to get rich these days.

But to search on your own is a full-time job-and-a-half. You have to read everything, digest it all, analyze the information, act on it...and do it fast, because opportunities become ancient history in precious little time.

Meanwhile, some of the best investment ideas are sitting practically on your doorstep, at a nearby office of Merrill Lynch.

We have the resources and the people to know, really know, investment opportunities as diverse as oil drilling partnerships and Treasury Bill futures, options and retirement plans.

Our research team is the best on Wall Street—in Wall Street's own opinion. And we make it easy to use that unrivaled resource: computer terminals at every Merrill Lynch office can instantly print out up-to-the-minute opinions on more than 1200 stocks.

Best of all is the way we tailor our advice to your requirements. Before offering a single suggestion, your Merrill Lynch Account Executive will spend a long while listening. Finding out what you really need. Because the smartest investment plans—the plans most likely to succeed—start with a clear definition of where they want to go. Are you looking for security or the opportunity to speculate? For current income or capital growth? What you tell us determines in large part what we tell you.

So we make a point of developing, for each customer, a sound long-term investment strategy, and we encourage you to stick with it and not be sidetracked by investment fads or temporary market aberrations. And we give you the security of knowing that we're going to stick with you and see you through to your goals. Merrill Lynch has more than $800 million in capital resources working for you, and we plan to be advising you long after all those fad investments have been written off.

So drop in at a nearby Merrill Lynch office and look over some of the brochures that explain our philosophy and way of doing things. Don't worry...we won't ask you to buy anything. In fact, we probably won't even let you, until we get to know you better.

When the band takes its place on the stadium floor, the excitement begins.

as the team breaks onto the field. Back to the game.

If college band directors and their student protégés feel taken for granted, maybe it's because they so often are. For as long as there has been college football, there have been marching bands to add to the pigskin panorama.

Technically speaking, militia bands were forerunners to that first Princeton-Rutgers game in 1869. Even the National Football League has bands, drafting players with halftime talents—players who move with tubas and clarinets. College bands have become as all-important to the sideline diversions of the pro game as they've been to the pennant-waving alumni since prehistoric pigskin days.

"I can't imagine an afternoon of college football without a band. I think everyone would get up and go home," said a Southwest band director.

"Our fans pay $10 to see a game and they want the whole works; that includes the band. All 71,000 of them become coaches and band directors, and they have that right."

So you think you want to be a band director, do you?

Well, the real maestros would pass along a nasty seven-letter word of caution that might have you reconsidering—P-R-A-C-T-I-C-E.

Show-stopping halftimes are produced and orchestrated to perfection—well, near-perfection—only after hours and hours of work. Practice, practice, practice makes perfect, and it's nothing out of the ordinary for those "teams" to practice pregames, postgames and 10- or 12-minute halftimes up to 10 hours each week of the 11-game season. The marvel of it all is that usually they pull it off without a noticeable hitch.

Crowds throughout the country, sometimes 70,000-100,000 strong, love the pageantry, the sideline-to-sideline, end zone-to-end zone action, color and music.

College bands, in fact, play such an important role in pumping up spirit off the field during a game that they are often called the team's 12th man.

For many tradition-minded schools in the Midwest and on the West Coast it's precision that counts in the music, the choreography and the visual formations—all equally important to the overall performance.

But other bands march to the beat of different drummers. Texas A&M's Aggie Corps, holding out as the country's only all-male college band, stands out with its dignified military step and distinct marches. Some schools incorporate both Big Band and military styles, while others are known for their inimitable "jump system" which the "stuffy, straight-laced" bands mimic in spoof shows.

"We jump from one formation to another and switch from one word to another association," a student conductor explained of his school's style. "We're more humor and entertainment. We laugh at ourselves."

His band squeezes four hours of marching and music practice into Friday night and Saturday morning in preparation for a game.

That organization is unique in that 20 students run the show—arranging, blocking out, drilling and conducting. Most schools rely on a bona fide director and a staff of up to 10 peers along with a multitude of student assistants.

Practice is, however, a late stage of a complicated and lengthy theme-gestation period.

Quality.
Again. And again. And again.

Quality makes them worth asking for.

The Official Lindsay Olive/Football IQ Test:

INSTRUCTIONS: Take this test between plays or at half-time. Circle the correct answers and mail this page to the college, government agency or professional football team of your choice. If they accept you on the basis of this test, you're truly smarter than they are.

1. The difference between a Lindsay Olive and a football is:

- A. Footballs taste lousy in sandwiches
- B. Have you ever tried a mushroom-and-football pizza?
- C. Lindsay Olives are Green or Black, but footballs are only brown
- D. Lindsay Olives are ripe and delicious, footballs are chewy and hard to digest

2. Which of these does not belong with the others?
(Hint: Lindsay Olives are in a class by themselves.)

3. If Lindsay Green Olives grew to the size of footballs, which size martini would you put them in?

- A. Extra large size
- B. Swimming pool size
- C. Stadium size
- D. Any size

4. Which of these would add flavor and excitement to salads?

5. A true football fan would never:

- A. Eat anything but Lindsay Olives
- B. Spit Lindsay Olive pits at the opposing team
- C. Let his sister date an offensive tight-end
- D. Ignore the game to take this test

6. Which of these would a fullback use to open a can of mellow, nutlike Lindsay Ripe Olives?

7. If footballs are brown, Lindsay Pitted Green Ripe Olives are green, what color are Lindsay Pitted Black Ripe Olives?

- A. Black
- B. Black
- C. A & B
- D. All of the above
- E. None of the above

8. NFL Linebackers enjoy Lindsay Pitted Black Ripe Olives in:

- A. Hospitals
- B. Chocolate malts
- C. Salads
- D. The Super Bowl

9. Which of these semi-official signals indicates time-out to enjoy wonderful Lindsay Pitted Green or Black Ripe Olives?

SUMMARY: If you were patient enough to read this far in the test, you deserve a little something extra. So send your name, address and zip code to Lindsay Olive Growers, P.O. Box 278, Lindsay, CA 93247, and we'll send you something sooner or later.

Foot-stomping music swells as college bands fill the stadium floor.

"We're pregnant about six months," said the head of the nation's largest band—360 marching members from a reservoir of 500 bandsmen (and women). The university has no school of music and draws heavily on its schools of engineering and science for its 800 musicians in various concert, symphonic, jazz and ensemble groups.

The pregnancy this director refers to is the brainstorming for theme ideas which starts in January. Finishing touches and final brushups are two weeks before the show premieres. In between times are hectic for directors who pen the arrangements and work out each bandsman's steps and music so that (at one university anyway) each gets a 20-page book of foot charts and a 25-page book of music the Monday before the "big day." A desk-top miniature football field and 400 tiny "men" bring the formations to life. Super organization is the by-word.

A large band might march three miles a day, 71,000 man miles a season, or nearly three times around the world at the equator. And they're not fair-weather bands either; they go through rain and snow, hot and cold.

Size doesn't make the difference in the quality of the show that telltale discipline and hard work do. Student participation in the blue-ribbon programs involves two-a-day, three-a-day or five-a-day practices the week before school starts in the fall. Some colleges lure musicians with scholarships and music schools, but the vast majority march for the sheer enjoyment of it, although some get credit hours toward graduation.

Women, often with hair tucked up inside hats, march alongside men, a change since the days of militia bands. And the NCAA has its first woman band director in Catherine Scott, who has been at the University of Alabama for years.

Yes, bands are the lifeblood of the home crowds, but "roadies"—the band of the visiting team—also contribute to a day's fun. Nothing like a little friendly competition between rival bands.

Fans may not always see a win, but they better get their money's worth from the band. And what a bargain; all that half-time hoopla—and what about the pregame, postgame; pre-pregame and post-postgame concerts?

Ah, and next week. More practice. New songs. A different routine.

Never a ho-hum halftime. Encore. Encore.

Play it again, band!

NOW I CAN GAIN 466,400 YARDS ON JUST ONE TANKFUL.

Yes. You've read it right.

Paul Hornung, one of football's premier running backs, can still gain thousands of yards on the ground.

This time with the Volkswagen Rabbit. Imagine. 466,400 yards.

Which means you can drive from Lambeau Field in Green Bay to Soldier Field in Chicago (and with plenty to spare) without having to stop for gas.

And just take a look at these stats:

With the optional 5-speed manual transmission, you can pick up an EPA estimated 25 miles per gallon, 40 MPG highway estimate. (Use estimated MPG for comparison to other cars. Mileage may vary with speed, weather and trip length. Actual highway mileage will probably be less.)

And there's more to gain by driving a

Rabbit than valuable yards.

There's also quickness.

At the snap, the Rabbit can bring you from 0 to 50 in only 8.3 seconds. Leaving some sports cars in the backfield.

With the Rabbit's front-wheel drive, there's great maneuverability, which makes moving in and out of tough spots (and finding openings) a lot easier.

And as to comfort, there's enough room so that even four members of the Pack don't have to feel like they're packed.

But probably what's most comforting is that you don't have to be a fullback to make all these gains.

Just a drive in our hatchback will do.

VOLKSWAGEN DOES IT AGAIN

The subject was victory defense, but to some football coaches it caused bemusement and wonder.

"Victory defense? I guess that's the defense used by the winning team," said one coach.

Another, practiced in the art of the quick quip, said, "I don't know anything about victory defense—never had to use one myself, never can get anybody to use it against me."

But on further examination, both revealed they indeed were familiar with that gridiron eccentricity called the victory defense, and like most coaches, treated it with a certain awe, as one of

by Bob Payne
Tacoma
NEWS-TRIBUNE

THE VICTORY DEFENSE

those things that can be terrifying.

"Victory defense" is not a term invented by television commentators, but it may be more often termed by coaches the "prevent defense": the general loosening up and lengthening out of the defense in the final stages of a game, when the idea is to "bend but not break," to permit a few yards, perhaps, but prevent a score.

It is employed, of course, in the interest of preserving victory, but usually while victory is still in doubt; thus, the name.

It is a challenge that many quarterbacks secretly love, for it is the perfect time to improve passing percentages—after all, one of the objects is to "give" the offense certain pass patterns.

It is a spectacle the fans love, for its helter-skelter look, four or five pass receivers zipping and zagging around the field with seven or eight defenders trying to keep track of them.

It is the time of the game when flea-flickers and other "gadget" plays are dug out of the playbook, to the delight of the old grad who remembers how that worked "back in '39."

And it is the time coaches often wonder if maybe they should have taken that real estate course after all.

Victory defense is, in fact, more a philosophy than an alignment, and is to be used only with the greatest discretion.

"I think it's something you use only on about the last play of a game or a half," said one coach, who has been particularly successful in close games.

"I think 15 or 20 years ago, you saw people going into it in the last two minutes or so—but as far as I'm concerned that just invites disaster," agreed another.

There are dangers with the victory defense. A team with a good quarterback can pick it apart.

Another problem is that the players tend to depend too much on each other—like "Oh, so-and-so will get him,"—because there are more men than usual on pass defense. But it can be just as dangerous the other way—when everybody converges on the ball. That's when the defense can get beat by a flea-flicker.

But probably the greatest danger of all is that special defenses, special situations, have the stamp of panic on them. Because of this, many coaches now prefer to play straight defense even to the end, if they can. Nowadays if a coach calls for a victory defense, it is merely a variation of the basic defense.

Oh, there have been exceptions. A West Coast coach recalled, "Once, when I was coaching small-college ball in the Midwest, a team used a one-man rush on us—they lined up in a three-man line but never rushed the ends. So there was one guy rushing, with everybody else all over the place. So we ran two plays up the middle and called time."

The one-man rush never caught on; indeed, a lot of coaches are skeptical of the three-man rush currently popular in some places. "One problem of the victory defense is that it may cut down the pass rush. I still think the best way to stop a passer, maybe the only way to stop a great passer, is with a big rush," said a coach whose team had seven interceptions in a big game last year.

Balance, many coaches agree, is one of the basic elements for success in a victory defense. Basically this means two men over the guards, two over the ends, four men in the short zones and three playing the deep zones.

Some teams play the rover or strong safety to the "field side" (the wide side of the field) or to the strength of the offense.

In an alignment with three linebackers and four deep backs, the linebackers play man-to-man on guys coming out of the backfield, and the backs double cover the key receivers.

Most teams and quarterbacks have a primary receiver they'll always try to go to in key situations. If he is double covered, the defense just might force the offense to do something they don't really want to do.

"There is nothing radically different about a victory defense," said a West Coast coach. "You mainly just back up your secondary a little, maybe 'give up' the shorter patterns. You may put a little more pressure on the linebackers, who probably won't be rushing but will be falling back.

"You know, there are a lot of 'preventish' situations during a game—third-and-15, for instance—when you're doing basically the same thing."

One of the Catch-22 aspects of victory defense, which merely adds to the excitement, is that most teams are willing to give up clock-stopping sideline passes in the interest of protecting against the bomb down the middle, and protecting the "seams" of the zone defense.

But that works both ways. You can stop the clock at the sidelines, but the sidelines can stop you. It's like having a 12th man on the field.

Expanding on this notion, a former southwestern coach noted, "A 'deep-out' sideline pass is a pass only the best arms can throw. It may be only 15 yards downfield but it's 40 or more yards for the quarterback and has to be thrown to a spot, with zip on it. So let them try."

So, from all these experiences and opinions emerge a few fundamentals of victory defense:

- Make it basic, preferably just a "backing out" of one of your basic defenses;
 - Don't forsake the pass rush, for it does wonders;
 - Keep cool, it's still a team game;
 - Consider not even using it at all.
- And, finally, say a little prayer.

Most teams will give up the clock-stopping sidelines pattern in the interest of protecting against the bomb down the middle.

Amos Alonzo Stagg

Seventy years of dedication to the development of young men through coaching, the most lifetime football coaching victories, a major university's football stadium named after him, a "Greatest Living American" award by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the first man to be selected to the National Football Foundation's Hall of Fame as both player and coach, all preceded by his selection to this nation's first All-America team in 1889, conspire to make it nearly impossible to know where to begin when praising Amos Alonzo Stagg. Worse, the above merely scratches the surface of his accomplishments.

Unquestionably one of the most inventive minds to ever draw X's and O's, Stagg is responsible for so much modern football strategy that the great Knute Rockne, when asked where he got his system, fired back, "from Stagg—all football comes from Stagg." Research shows that to be only a slight exaggeration of truth. An abbreviated list of his major contributions is enough to get the point across. He invented: the huddle; the onside kick; the quick kick; the short punt formation; the hand-off from a fake kick; the numbering of players; the padded goalposts; the charging sled; the tackling dummy (an old mattress at first) and wind sprints for practices; single and double flanker pass patterns and most aspects of the modern T-formation.

Stagg's designing of the T-formation's foundations was encouraged by the presence of Walter Eckersall. Universally accorded the title as one of the two greatest pre-pass quarterbacks, (Charley Daly of Harvard is the other), his talent gave life to Stagg's ingenuity. "When Eckersall came to Chicago in 1903," Stagg recalled, "I started faking and pivoting. Then, in 1905 I had him fake, pivot and then run around end." It was the first end sweep by a quarterback.

Carrying his innovations further down this new path, Stagg initiated the delayed buck, the man in motion and, in 1906, a fake hand-off and a forward pass. This deception worked so well, Stagg reversed it and instituted the first fake pass topped off by a run, otherwise known as the option play. Coach Stagg originated that wrinkle for a 1908 game with Minnesota and his Maroons lambasted the confused Gophers 29-0.

Inflicting the unexpected on a foe is good for an advantage, but Stagg's teams were also known to be the best and hardest drilled in the Big Ten. Born the sixth of eight children to a poor New Jersey family, Stagg's familiarity with hard work commenced when he put himself through high school, from which he graduated in three years.

After a year's preparation at Phillips Exeter Academy, Amos entered Yale Divinity in 1889. Physically unprepared for the drastic New England winters, Stagg eventually collapsed from malnutrition and the cold. Happily, a friend took charge of Stagg's recovery and found him a decent paying job as a waiter.

History doesn't record how proficient a waiter Stagg was, but as a 5-7, 145-pound freshman end, he made the first All-America team ever selected. A superb athlete, Stagg's collegiate baseball career was equally auspicious. A masterful pitcher, "Lonnie" Stagg hurled Yale to five championships, maintaining a lifetime 17-3 edge over rival Harvard and, in one performance, whiffing 20 Princeton Tigers.

In fact, Stagg was good enough to elicit the astounding offer of $4,200 to pitch for the New York Giants. As a self-proclaimed "invincible amateur," Stagg declined the opportunity to play professional baseball. But the mammoth amount of money offered spurred one newspaperman to editorialize, "So long as a

EVOLUTION OF COLLEGE FOOTBALL THROUGH RULE CHANGES

By Buck Turnbull, Des Moines REGISTER

There will be no special ceremonies this season, no pennants waving and trumpets blaring to signify that this is the centennial year in college football.

But if we are to go by the rule book, football as we know it today had its real beginning in 1880.

That's the year when the sport first went to 11 players on a side and came up with something to be known as the line of scrimmage, which would distinguish American football for all time from soccer and rugby.

In the earlier years, starting with a soccer game between Princeton and Rutgers in 1869, there were as many as 20 and 25 players on a side.

When Harvard and McGill met in May of 1875, another game widely acknowledged in the history books as shaping the sport of football, it was actually two contests—soccer for one half, rugby for the other half.

The Harvard athletes were more familiar with soccer, which was to be the order of the afternoon, but they were intrigued while watching the Canadian team from McGill toss the ball around rugby style in pre-game practice. In soccer, of course, you're not allowed to touch the ball with your hands.

So following a conference between the opposing captains it was decided to split the day's festivities into two games. Harvard won, 4-0.

The next year representatives from eastern colleges met to standardize rules for such competition, and a brawling game was devised with 15 players on a side.

But not until 1880 did Walter Camp, the "father of American football," do away with the rugby scrum in favor of a scrimmage line to put the ball in play with a center snap for 11-man teams.

However, it would be many more years before football came close to resembling what you're seeing now.

Originally there was a premium on kicking the ball over a crossbar—the field goal of today. That was worth four points. Carrying the ball over the goal line and touching it down—thus our touchdown—scored only one point. But those figures fluctuated at the discretion of Camp and his Rules Committee.

In 1882, when the rule was adopted permitting three downs to gain five yards (four downs to advance 10 yards didn't come in until 1912), four touchdowns were given precedence over one goal from the field.

If a player was tackled in his end zone, that would be known as a safety, with one point to be awarded the opposing team. Actually, it was half a point at the start, because two safeties were to equal one touchdown.

The team that surrendered the safety would keep the ball, starting play again at its 10-yard line. Many years later the loophole in that rule would be exploited and finally changed.

In 1884 the scores were set at five points for field goals, four for touchdowns, two for conversion kicks and one for a safety. After that season the safety was upped to two points, where it has remained.

In 1897 touchdowns and field goals were both placed at five points, and the conversion was dropped to one point. Seven years later the field goal went down to four points, then to three in 1909, but not until 1912 did the touchdown finally settle in to stay at six points.

The only scoring revision in modern times involved the conversion rule, which was altered in 1958. It gives the team that scores a touchdown the option of running or passing for two points or kicking for what had been the long-standard one point.

Now let's return to the safety situation and several games in 1925 that forced the rulemakers to take a look at this section and change the rule.

In early November of that year Iowa State was leading Drake, 7-0, with time rapidly running out. Rather than give up possession of the ball, Iowa State took three consecutive safeties in the last several minutes and held on for a 7-6 victory. The defeat knocked Drake out of the Missouri Valley title.

A few weeks later Northwestern used slightly different but equally successful tactics for a 3-2 upset of Michigan.

Northwestern's Tiny Lewis accounted for all five points in that game, which was played on a muddy field.

In the first two minutes Lewis kicked a field goal for the only points scored on the Wolverines all season. Then in the third quarter he retreated and gave Michigan an intentional safety so he wouldn't have to punt from his end zone.

Fearful that others would see the benefit of stalling to protect a lead in the closing minutes, the Football Rules Committee promptly took away any such option by installing today's rule. Starting in 1926 a team that draws a safety must free kick from its 20-yard line.

Oddly, years before Iowa State also was involved in a controversy that never has been resolved, and probably never will to the satisfaction of Nebraska. It's why the two schools each claim victory over the other in 1907 and is why the rule on field goals was clarified.

There was a one-in-a-million bounce late in their game that year. Nebraska led, 10-9, when the Cyclones attempted a field goal. The ball bounced on the ground and then took a crazy hop—right over the crossbar.

Did it count? Well, the rules said: "A goal is made by kicking the ball in any way, except by a punt, over the crossbar of the opponents' goal."

The matter was appealed to Walter Camp for an approved ruling, and he determined that the field goal should be allowed, since rules of the time were unclear. But it led to the present rule that field goals and extra-point kicks must go over the bar on the fly.

Thus, Iowa State claimed—and still claims—a 13-9 triumph (field goals were four points then, remember). But the game has always been carried in Nebraska's record books as a 10-9 victory by the Cornhuskers.

Other rules have been either altered or inserted for similar reasons.

Northwestern was involved in another game that caused the rulemakers to make a revision on simultaneous catches of a forward pass.

Back in the days when many sportswriters also served as game officials, Sec Taylor of the Des Moines Register worked the 1927 Northwestern-Missouri contest. Near the end of his long career with the Register in 1961, Taylor remembered it as "one of the most exciting I have ever seen."

Northwestern was a 34-19 winner and Taylor related: "Dick Hanley, then the Wildcats' coach, had his team use a forward pass followed by a lateral many times.

"The officials disallowed about half of them because the receiver of the pass did not gain possession of the ball but batted it laterally to a teammate.

"Also, a rule change resulted from the game. An eligible receiver on the passing team and a defender caught a pass simultaneously.

"The officials awarded the ball to the offensive team, although there was no rule covering this contingency at that time. That winter the Rules Committee made a rule stating that the offensive team gets the ball."

The forward pass did not come into football until 1906, and then under such tight restrictions that few teams chose to employ it.

As historians have told us, football was a brutal game of slugfests and flying wedges in the early days.

In January of 1885, for example, Harvard's faculty prohibited its school from playing the game until one rule was changed. The rule? It stated that a player had to be warned three times for slugging before he was banished from the field.

Harvard did return to competition the following fall, but its stand against roughness was instrumental in an 1886 rule change making slugging illegal.

After there had been a number of fatalities in the 1905 season, President Theodore Roosevelt called collegiate athletic leaders to Washington and advised them to clean up their sport or risk having it banned by government edict.

Thus was the forward pass born to open up the game.

"It wasn't, however, quite as revolutionary as you might think," Flem Hall of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram wrote years ago in a treatise on the evolution of passing. "There were limitations . . . and what limitations!

"The pass could not be thrown over the middle of the line in a five-yard lateral zone on either side of the center. If the ball were touched but not caught by either team, it could be recovered by either side; if not caught or touched, it passed to the defense."

Get that! The offense lost the ball on an incomplete pass. It's easy to see why passing did not immediately rock the football world.

About the only coach who saw its potential was a man named Eddie Cochems of St. Louis University, whose team threw the ball all over the lot while winning 11 straight games in 1906 and outscoring the opposition, 402 points to 11.

"The wonder is that everybody didn't climb on the bandwagon—but they didn't," Hall said. "What is more mysterious is why Cochems and St. Louis cooled off. They did."

Meanwhile, football fields were chalked off in five-yard squares, so the officials could enforce the passing restrictions.

Can you imagine what such a field looked like? Yep, it was a gridiron, and the term has become synonymous with football ever since.

Gradually, the passing rules were revised, but it wasn't until 1913, when Notre Dame shocked Army, 35-13, on the passing of Gus Dorais to his two ends, J.S. Pliska and the legendary Knute Rockne, that footballs were airborne to stay.

At least one football rule—the distance between goal posts in the college game, 23 feet 4 inches—went into the books out of necessity.

John Waldorf, former Big Eight Conference supervisor of officials and a longtime member of the Rules Committee, tells an amusing tale of how that came about.

"In 1959, when Fritz Crisler was chairman, the committee decided to widen the goal posts to encourage the use of the field goal," recalls Waldorf.

"After the first two days of preliminary meetings, the committee agreed that the desired width of the crossbar would be 24 feet.

"The night before the final day's meeting, a lumberman friend of Crisler's called him and asked him what he was going to use for lumber.

"Since most goal posts at the time were made of two-by-fours (wood two inches by four inches), and since the longest two-by-fours of the time measured 24 feet, and since the crossbar had to be fastened to the four-inch uprights, the maximum width between goal posts could not exceed 23-4.

"After a hurried consultation with his committee, Crisler and his colleagues made the distance 23 feet 4 inches—the present dimension."

It has stayed there even though practically every goal post used today is made of metal.

In a century's time almost everything has happened in football, some that couldn't possibly be foreseen.

The ball has even exploded in midair on an extra-point kick. That's how Washington and Jefferson beat Geneva in 1939.

Part of the ball sailed over the crossbar. No rule was ever written to cover such an oddity, but the officials allowed the point that won for Washington and Jefferson, 13-12. Maybe the score should have been 12-1/2 to 12.

A NON-TECHNICAL LOOK AT THE TECHNICAL ADVANTAGES OF USING STP GAS TREATMENT

It all starts with this wonderful chemical called Alkylhydroxybenzylpolyamine.

Fancy name for something that looks like a balloon on a string. But, as the primary active ingredient, it does two important things in your car's fuel system:

First, it helps remove water from your gas tank by surrounding droplets of water, suspending them in your gas so they can pass harmlessly through your fuel system.

Second, it helps prevent grunge like gum and varnish from sticking to metal surfaces of the fuel system in two ways: By coating the metal surfaces of the fuel system and by surrounding the gum and varnish to keep them from getting a toehold. This helps keep your carburetor clean and that helps maintain peak engine performance.

Still with us?

So far, all you've got to remember is that STP Gas Treatment fights back against bad guys in your fuel system.

Now for the second thing to remember: All this isn't fiction. It's fact. Results proven in scientific tests. For instance:

FIGHTS RUST.

These two steel bars were both soaked in the same gas plus water. Only difference? The gas used with the bar on the right contained STP Gas Treatment.

FIGHTS WATER.

Water causes more than rust. It can freeze, too. Brrrr! Regular use can lessen the likelihood of gas line freeze. Tests proved STP Gas Treatment increases the emulsification of water and that means it helps water get through your system, out your exhaust.

FIGHTS CARB DEPOSITS.

Some carburetor openings are tiny enough to become restricted by gum and varnish, which can rob your engine of efficiency. We put clean metal sleeves in 28 engine tests. Without us (left) nasty formations developed. With us (right) sleeves came out much cleaner. Take your pick.

FIGHTS VALVE DEPOSITS.

For this test, we matched up six new cars in three matched pairs. After only 12,000 miles, look at the difference that can develop in valve deposit formation. (We're on the right.) That stuff on the left? Would you want that in your car?

In summary.

Maybe you've never thought about using a gas treatment. Well, you should. Odds are, you've got some bad guys lurking in your fuel system. Things you ought to fight back against — if you want to keep your car running like it ought to.

STP Gas Treatment does exactly that.

It's the best selling Gas Treatment in America.

FIGHT BACK! WITH STP GAS TREATMENT.

pitcher gets $4,200 for six months and a preacher gets $600 for a year, so long will there be good pitching and bad preaching.

The lucrative offer didn't swing Stagg into baseball's camp, but his unquenchable love for sports and the opportunity it gave him to teach young men veered him out of Yale Divinity School and into the International YMCA College (later Springfield College) in Springfield, Mass., where Lonnie received his first exposure to coaching.

Reflecting in later years on the switch from preaching to teaching, Stagg mused, "The coaching profession is one of the noblest and farthest reaching in building manhood. No man is too good to be an athletic coach for youth."

During the time Stagg was in Springfield, John D. Rockefeller was building a university in Chicago and the new school's president was one of Stagg's old Yale professors, Dr. William Rainey Harper. Harper wanted Stagg to head his athletic department and after receiving assurances that he could combine the athletic and physical education departments, Stagg accepted the assignment.

Stagg's adventures at the young school included the chores of coaching the basketball team, the track team and, of course, the baseball team. As in all his endeavors, A.A. brought his special élan to the task and left his mark on each sport. In track and field, Stagg specialized in developing quarter-milers and he introduced, among others, the first of this nation's great black sprinters, Binga Dismond. Amos was four times appointed to coach the U.S. Olympic track squad and he was a five-time member of the U.S. Olympic Committee.

Baseball can thank Stagg for the head-first slide and the batting cage, while Japan can thank Amos for baseball. A.A. led the first tour of Japan by a U.S. nine. Even swimming was improved by the Stagg touch. He invented the trough around the pool that handles the overflow.

One contribution Stagg made to sports hardly deserves mention with most of his other accomplishments, but it will likely draw the praise of many. With his own straight razor, Stagg ensured that his 1898 football team would be the first clean-shaven squad in University of Chicago history.

In the more obvious category of wins-losses, Stagg brought his Chicago footballers seven Big Ten crowns, four of those winners completing the season unsullied by a loss. The 1905 eleven, with 5-7 Walter Eckersall at the helm, accumulated 212 points while allowing a scant five. Highlighting that perfect 9-0 season was a 2-0 triumph over Fielding "Hurry Up" Yost's Michigan contingent. That safety represented the total allotment of points Michigan relinquished that year.

Subsequent titles came in 1907, '08, 1913 and 1924, Stagg's last in the Big Ten. From then on his Chicago fortunes waned, reaching their nadir in 1929 with the ascension of Robert M. Hutchins as the school's president. Hutchins' goal was the ultimate intellectual institution and football didn't fit his poorly balanced conception of a university's function.

By 1932 Stagg's mandatory retirement as an active coach at age 70 was decreed. A.A. didn't feel like retiring and he knew there were many good years left in him. Indeed, a picture of his health can be inferred by his success at a sport new to Stagg. He took up golf at age 70 and within a year he was shooting in the 70s! Stagg was decidedly unhappy with his impending retirement, the more so as there was a youngster, a freshman, on that 1932 team that Stagg expected to be of great assistance in producing a winner. The halfback Stagg wished to stay around and coach to maturity was Jay Berwanger, the first Heisman Trophy winner.

Disappointment at having to step down from his 40-year post was mitigated somewhat by a trip with the last Chicago team to New Haven and a meeting with his alma mater, heavily favored Yale. Stagg's boys staged a mild upset with a 7-7 tie and humorist/poet George E. Phair penned his thoughts.

*Alonzo Stagg, a bright young lad
Came back to dear old Yale
And all the afternoon he had
The Bulldog turning pale.
Ah, what a coach that kid will be
When he has reached maturity.*

Phair couldn't imagine how prophetic his words were. Rather than retire in the bloom of his youth, Stagg accepted a post as head coach at the College of the Pacific in Stockton, California. The ambitious new head coach chortled "I am going west and I feel like I am about 21 years old instead of 71. I am as happy as a college sophomore with his first football letter."

The task at COP (now UOP) was considerable as the small school faced such powers as USC, St. Mary's and UCLA. Undaunted, Stagg brought COP its first conference championship in 1936 (unscored upon in conference play). Still going strong seven years later, Stagg, at the age of 81, was selected Coach of the Year by the American Football Coaches Association and as Man of the Year by the Football Writers of America.

Stagg continued at COP until he was 84, then he began assisting his two head coach sons, one in Pennsylvania, the other in Oregon. In 1951, at 89, Stagg helped Amos Jr. bring his Susquehanna team an undefeated season. That year Stagg was inducted into the Football Hall of Fame. Properly stated, Stagg retired to his Stockton home.

In 1965, at 102 years of age, Amos Alonzo Stagg died, leaving a legacy grand enough to make him a legend in his own lifetime. His 314 victories speak for themselves as do the multitudinous contributions to football history. The true testimony, however, must come from a coach's players, those who knew him most intimately. About Stagg, one of his former pupils put it this way, "Stagg's hold on his squads was so remarkable that we played not for the school, the girl friend, not for publicity—not for anything or anybody, but Stagg."

YOU CAN'T TELL THE AIRLINES WITHOUT A SCORECARD.

All airlines serve food.

All airlines give you a seat. All airlines fly you somewhere.

But no airline does all of these things with quite the same comfort, class or flair as Frontier.

One airline serves food worth breaking training for: Frontier.

So if you're keeping score, it adds up to this. When you fly to the sports of a Frontier city, get a winning run for your money. Just call your travel agent and fly Frontier.

There's no other airline that's in the same league.

One airline flies to the sports of 22 states: Frontier.

One airline gives you room to stretch in every seat: Frontier.

A hand is shown holding a single, upright Budweiser can. The can is white with red and blue labels, featuring the Budweiser logo and text including "12 FL. OZ. (355 ML.)", "Budweiser", "LAGER BEER", and "Brewed by our original process from the Choicest Hops, Rice and Best Barley". The can is positioned over a large, messy pile of crushed and flattened beer cans. The background is a dark, textured surface, possibly a trash can or a pile of garbage, with some liquid visible. The lighting is dramatic, highlighting the hand and the can it holds.

near you!

A Big I independent insurance agent is a professional insurance person who serves YOU first. The Big I agent represents more than one insurance company and is equipped to shop the marketplace for the BEST insurance program tailored to YOUR needs. The professional competence of a Big I agent is demonstrated by membership in a professional organization which demands the highest order of integrity and competence: the Nebraska Association of Independent Insurance Agents (also known as the Independent Insurance Agents of Nebraska).

It costs no more to go first class!

If YOUR agent is on the list, you are to be congratulated. You have engaged the finest talent available, to handle your car, home, and business insurance needs.

If your agent is not on the list, — well, don't you think it is time?

This is Missouri

The University of Missouri-Columbia, located in mid-Missouri almost equidistant from St. Louis and Kansas City along Interstate 70, has at least two unique characteristics. It is the oldest state University west of the Mississippi — and is the site of the first School of Journalism (1909) in the nation.

Ol' Mizzou also is the home of a Tiger football team which has enjoyed its prestigious moments since that spot was introduced as an intercollegiate activity nearly a century ago.

Established on a single campus at Columbia in 1839, the University has grown to four campuses with full-fledged institutions at Rolla, St. Louis and Kansas City. But Columbia still is recognized as the capstone in the system, offering instruction in 15 colleges and schools, as well as through the Extension Service. Such diversity — from agriculture to medicine, from veterinary medicine to engineering, has resulted in heavy impetus on interdisciplinary programs in studies and in research.

Recent campus growth is reflected in the completion of a new home for the School of Nursing, a $6.5 million medical veterinary center, and a $1 million alumni center. The latter was financed entirely by contributions from alumni and friends.

The traditional Ionic columns, all that remain from the first UMC administration building destroyed by fire in 1892, are recognized as a campus landmark. Nearby is located a granite obelisk, the original marker over the grave of Thomas Jefferson. It was given to the University by the third president's heirs in recognition of it being the first such institution established in the Louisiana Purchase, consummated during Jefferson's administration.

Campus enrollment was 23,264 students last year, and the academic staff numbers more than 2500. UMC has a central campus covering more than 800 acres, and is governed by a nine-member Board of Curators appointed by the governor and confirmed by the Missouri Senate.

Chief executive officer of the University system is President James C. Olson. The Columbia campus chancellor is Dr. Barbara Uehling, who assumed her duties two years ago as successor to retiring Dr. Herbert W. Schooling.

Cornhusker Wheel Club 1980

Automobile dealers in Nebraska are contributing a large measure of help to the University of Nebraska athletic program through the loan of courtesy cars. Like other programs which are a part of the Cornhusker booster group activities, this project enables the Nebraska Athletic Department to make greater use of its funds. These sports-minded dealers around the state have earned a debt of gratitude from the University of Nebraska Athletic Department. They are an important part of the "team" that includes players, coaches, administration, faculty, staff, students, alumni, Husker Educational Award group, Touchdown Club, Extra Point Club, Beef Club and the courtesy car program.

A Lincoln neighborhood group was assisted by Architecture students and faculty in its neighborhood assessment.

Unique community services being offered through UNL's College of Architecture

By Bonita Eaton
Graduate Assistant
Office of University Information

Architecture—it's a word that brings to mind a picture of men and women drawing up plans of grandiose buildings; physical monuments to society's tastes.

And a college of architecture, then, would be a place where students are trained to be architects.

But that's not all architecture is and that's not all a college of architecture does, especially at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

At UNL, the study of architecture—which also includes landscaping, park development, community planning, playground development and community development in general—is a give-and-take proposition.

Student education and community service through college of Architecture programs and research benefit both the students and Nebraska.

"We seek to provide opportunities for both faculty and students to have applied learning experiences in communities and at the same time help those communities in their activities," said Dr. Kip Hulvershorn, director of the Community Resource and Research Center, one of three departments of the College of Architecture.

Before 1973, architecture was a course of study in the College of Engineering and Architecture. Designated a college in 1973, it now includes a department of Architecture, a Department of Community and Regional Planning and the Community Resources and Research Center.

Unique Roll

The Community Resource and Research Center (CRRC), before becoming a part of the College of Architecture in 1974, was the Community Development Unit of the University Extension Division.

"Much of our mission is still the same," said Hulvershorn, who has been with the division since 1973 and director of CRRC since mid 1978.

The mission is its unique community service role, combined with research to assess a community's needs that might be met through university architectural studies.

While the architecture and community and regional planning departments of the college are principally instructional in nature, Hulvershorn said, the CRRC is dedicated to two goals—research and public service.

Seven staff members comprise the center and they also have some teaching responsibilities in the other two departments of the college. At any given time, Hulvershorn said, 15 architecture students—research assistants and work-study students—are at work on projects in the center.

The public service goal of the center is most evident in the Nebraska Community Improvement Program, which the center co-administers with the State Department of Economic Development.

The program, recognized by travelers statewide by roadside signs indicating a community's participation in the program, is dedicated to community betterment.

Encourages Improvement

"It encourages communities to improve themselves," Hulvershorn said. "The (CRRC) staff works with communities to set goals, to develop strategies, to accomplish goals. That's where we come in as resource people.

"A lot of our activity comes out of that," Hulvershorn added. Architecture design studio classes sometimes develop class projects from the center's work in the communities.

Two hundred communities are participating in the Nebraska Community Improvement Program (NCIP), co-administered by the CRRC and the Nebraska Department of Economic Development (DED), which culminates this fall in an annual awards program. About 20 Lincoln and Omaha neighborhoods are entered in the competition.

Communities are interested in downtown improvement, multi-purpose community centers, historic preservation and land use planning.

Build in Flexibility

Most planning is human services-oriented, Hulvershorn said, because a facility cannot be designed without keeping in mind who will use it and building in flexibility.

Two landscape architects work with communities in designing parks and playgrounds or landscaping public property.

Another staff member is working on jail construction design.

Other areas of architectural assistance include indoor and outdoor designs for the handicapped.

The NCIP program is also assisting communities by offering a humanist-in-residence program. Faculty members in the humanities disciplines at UNL and other Nebraska colleges can spend time in communities developing humanities projects. Such projects might include interviewing longtime members of the community for oral histories, developing a photography exhibit on the early development of a community, creating a public lecture and discussion series of literary offerings in the community or organizing ethnic festivals.

The center has also worked with DED to develop attitude surveys for communities to help them assess their own needs.

One of CRRC's functions is to conduct research on community needs and community development and to keep research materials available for communities.

From such research oftentimes comes grant proposals or classroom project ideas.

Spotting a need for solar housing, for example, resulted in an architectural design studio designing a house using solar energy as a hands-on design project.

Research has been conducted on transportation planning, recreational travel in light of the energy situation, and historic architecture.

The use of conceptual models helps neighborhood groups foresee the visual impact of their improvements.

The center also coordinates and administers the college's grants, offers technical assistance to communities without professional community planning or parks and recreation staffs, and works with the UNL Division of Continuing Studies in providing continuing education for community officials, planners and architects.

W. Cecil Steward is dean of the UNL College of Architecture.

Cite College of Architecture

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln College of Architecture has been cited by the Nebraska Recreation and Parks Association for its "outstanding contribution to the citizens of the various communities within the State."

The College, according to Dale R.

Mathre, president of the association, "has assisted in the development of recreation and park opportunities within the State. It has provided design, student experience, and a multitude of various forms of technical assistance to Nebraskans in the areas of parks and recreation."

"Give America's Olympic hopefuls the same chance you gave me!"

—Eric Heiden

It took me ten years of hard training to become an Olympic champion . . . and donations from great people like you helped make it happen.

Last year more than 10,000 athletes, of all levels of ability, came to the Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs. Helping young athletes become the best they can be . . . that's what the United States Olympic Committee is all about.

Did you know that only 10% of the U.S. Olympic Committee's budget goes toward sending a Team to the Olympic Games?

Ongoing programs like the Training Center, sports medicine, National Sports Festivals, national and international competitions, clinics and seminars account for the other 90%.

It costs $12.61 to train one athlete, one day, at the Training Center. Our American athletes need your help now . . . more than ever.

Give some other athlete the chance I got. The more you contribute, the more athletes you can help. Show your pride in America's best.

Model 5020
Crafted of wood and non-wood materials.

PROVEN: 25% SHARPER COLOR PICTURE THAN EVER BEFORE POSSIBLE.

MORE LINES OF RESOLUTION
MAKE THE DIFFERENCE.

Lines of resolution determine how sharp your color TV picture will be. The more lines, the sharper the picture. And Magnavox has more lines than ever before possible.

Ordinary color TV pictures have 260 lines. Magnavox Computer Color 330 delivers 330 lines. That's 25% more lines of resolution for Magnavox.

That means Magnavox has a 25% sharper, crisper, clearer color picture.

For documentation of this fact, please write: Magnavox, Dept. 700, Fort Wayne, IN. 46804.
